Foreign-language sources:

Google Scholar and other databases such as Scopus and Web of Science do not capture complete information from Czech- and Slovak-language publications. Books and exhibition catalogs in Czech and Slovak are especially not well-represented, so many citations of my work are missing from the online aggregators.

The impact of my work and its reach particularly in the scholarly community in Central and Eastern Europe can be measured with other data, such as twenty-five invited lectures and conference papers in the Czech Republic, Slovakia, Estonia, Germany, and Hungary since 2011. Online searches find my work in English and Czech cited in at least twenty-five theses for bachelor's degrees, master's degrees, and doctoral degrees in Czech, Slovak, and other languages; only some of which appear in Google Scholar results. Exhibitions and exhibition catalogs produced by scholars in Prague, Brno, Olomouc, and Ostrava have built on my work and I have been invited to contribute new texts to three exhibition catalogs. I also serve as an invited external member of the Urban History research group at the Institute for Contemporary History in Prague.

In addition to my profile within academia, my work on postwar housing and socialist urbanism has also been cited often in the popular press, on blogs, and in the Czech media. I have been interviewed by newspapers, radio stations, and television stations in Prague and Ostrava, including a full-page feature story and interview for the print edition of the Prague daily newspaper, Lidové noviny, in July 2015.
